Dear Applicant,

The Graduate School of System Design and Management, founded on the 150th anniversary of Keio University, is Japan's first full-scale educational and research institution set up to produce graduates able to create new systems that fuse engineering with the social sciences. The purpose of the Graduate School is to support sustained development in the international community and set in motion new trends for the 21st century. Recent years have seen the emergence of serious incidents, scandals, and other social phenomena that hint at the fraying of modern society's enormous and complex systems. In overcoming these problems and designing technical systems that are safe, secure, and harmonious with society, we need to use both approaches based on engineering concepts to compose secure design by looking at things as systems and approaches based on social science concepts to accurately ascertain trends in the international community and markets, flexibly consider diverse senses of values and new organizational formats and create new sustainable social systems.

By implementing "Design Projects" that devise concrete systems, the Graduate School endeavors to offer a comprehensive curriculum for training systems designers capable of innovative system design and project leaders capable of management that incorporates complex processes in order to satisfy the needs of companies that develop and operate aerospace equipment, large-scale plants, and automobile manufacturing as well as those in the energy, biotechnology, robotics, information and communications, media industries, socio-critical systems, and disaster countermeasure systems. To this end, the Graduate School opens its doors widely, not just to new university graduates, but also to working adults from government organizations and companies in Japan and overseas. Accordingly we have created a flexible system for administering entrance examinations. Our "Program for Career Professionals" even allow students to enroll while still employed. We have also enabled students in the Master's Program to select a flexible course curriculum in order to meet the specific needs of people from a diversity of backgrounds. The Graduate School has increased the number of classes conducted in English to provide an opportunity to obtain a degree in English.

Please ensure that you have a clear understanding of the concepts and approaches of the Graduate School when applying for admission. We'll be looking forward to applying from those who try to improve their skills, aim to become systems designers and project's leaders in the future.

[4] First Screening

The First Screening will entail a screening of application documents.

[5] Announcement of Results of the First Screening

The results of the First Screening will be announced on the website of the Graduate School of System Design and Management.

Results will all be displayed by examinee number. The schedule and assembly time for the Second Screening will be announced on the same day. Same information will also be posted simultaneously at the Admissions Office of the Graduate School of System Design and Management located at the second floor of the Collaboration Complex at Hiyoshi Campus. Inquiries regarding the screening results will not be accepted.

[6] Second Screening

The applicants who have passed the first document-based screening should undergo the second and final screening that comprises, for each individual applicant, both a face-to-face interview and an essay writing. They are both aimed at examining the applicant's knowledge on systems, design and management, and her/his ability to address the issue in question in ways that are both logical, and are from broad, birds'-eye perspectives.

For both the interview and the essay writing, those seeking to enter the school from the second semester that begins in September could choose English, should they wish to make English her/his working language. Those wishing to enter in April must choose Japanese. The choice of language between the two makes no difference in selecting the entrants.*

For the second screening, print out and come with your examination admission slip as would be instructed at the announcement that you have succeeded in passing the first screening. Applicants who have come later than the designated assembly time should be considered absent and would not be allowed to take the second screening.

Those physically cannot be present at the second screening could instead do both the interview and the essay writing on-line, via such video communication means as WebEx (preferred) or Skype. The school takes absolutely no responsibility as regards the quality, or the lack thereof, of the video transmissions between the school and the applicant. Voice-only communication, if it is the maximum quality achievable, makes the applicant automatically ineligible. The quality of visual communication is vital not only for the face-to-face interview but also for the essay-writing in order for appropriate anti-plagiarism supervision to be provided throughout the duration of the time for the writing.

More technically:

1. Prepare a web camera, a headphone, a microphone, and broadband internet environment. Speakers must stay turned off;
2. You (the examinee) must be alone by yourself in the room, connected with no one outside, throughout the examination.
3. A date will be set prior to the examination so that the applicant can check whether the online system/connection works properly. For the second screening, you must use the same room used for this advance check. Should you wish to use a different room for a specifiable reason, contact the Admissions Office of the Graduate School of System Design and Management well in advance of the second screening.

More details of the second screening are to be provided to those who have successfully passed the first screening. Note, also, that Japanese calendar and Japan Standard Time will be used throughout.

Language Proficiency Screening

You must provide the school with verification as regards your academic linguistic proficiency of either English or Japanese, if your native language is neither one of the above.

* Points to note on the day of the examination

If you are late due to disruptions or delays in public transportation serving the vicinity of the examination venue, you may still be permitted to take the examination. Please report to a staff member.

If there are major disruptions or delays and the university determines on the day of the examination that many students taking the exams will be affected, the exam times of all examinations may be delayed to the extent that this does not interfere with the examinations from taking place. However, the university will not be liable for personal losses incurred by students due to these measures.

Those who have contracted and not yet recovered from an infectious disease for which the School Health and Safety Act requires attendance at university to be suspended must refrain from taking the examinations as there is a risk of infecting other students, examination proctors, etc. However, this will not apply if either a doctor at the school or other medical institution deems that there is no concern of the medical condition infecting others. Please note that even if you refrain from taking examinations for the above reason, measures such as the provision of makeup examinations or return of application fees will not be taken.

[7] Announcement of Results of the Second Screening

The results of the Second Screening will be announced on the website of the Graduate School of System Design and Management.

Results will all be displayed by examinee number. Same information will also be posted simultaneously at the Admissions Office of the Graduate School of System Design and Management located at the second floor of the Collaboration Complex at Hiyoshi Campus. Inquiries regarding the screening results will not be accepted.

<http://www.sdm.keio.ac.jp/en/admission/index.html>

[6] Second Screening

For the Second Screening, we will give oral examinations to the applicants successfully passing the First Screening. Oral examinations will see how the examinees can put the given questions into a logical as well as broader perspective, with a focus on the extent in which the examinees understand “systems”, “design”, and “management”. Applicants may select either Japanese or English as the language to be used in the examinations; this choice will have no impact on the results of the Second Screening. Please consider choosing the appropriate language corresponding to your enrolment period.* Please print out an examination admission slip as indicated in an instruction at the announcement of the first screening and bring it with you to the second screening.

The oral examinations will be conducted online (using online devices such as Skype) for applicants undergoing screening outside Japan. Language Proficiency Screening

You must provide the school with verification as regards your academic linguistic proficiency of either English or Japanese, if your native language is neither one of the above.

* Points to note on the day of the examination

If you are late due to disruptions or delays in public transportation serving the vicinity of the examination venue, you may still be permitted to take the examination. Please report to a staff member.

If there are major disruptions or delays and the university determines on the day of the examination that many students taking the exams will be affected, the exam times of all examinations may be delayed to the extent that this does not interfere with the examinations from taking place. However, the university will not be liable for personal losses incurred by students due to these measures.

Those who have contracted and not yet recovered from an infectious disease for which the School Health and Safety Act requires attendance at university to be suspended must refrain from taking the examinations as there is a risk of infecting other students, examination proctors, etc. However, this will not apply if either a doctor at the school or other medical institution deems that there is no concern of the medical condition infecting others. Please note that even if you refrain from taking examinations for the above reason, measures such as the provision of makeup examinations or return of application fees will not be taken.

[7]Announcement of Results of the Second Screening

The results of the Second Screening will be announced on the website of the Graduate School of System Design and Management.

Results will all be displayed by examinee number. Same information will also be posted simultaneously at the Admissions Office of the Graduate School of System Design and Management located at the second floor of the Collaboration Complex at Hiyoshi Campus.
