

Lectures on Maslow's Psychological System: Its Importance for Political Theory in the 21st Century

Graduate School of System Design and Management
and Graduate School of Human Relations

October 16 (Fri.), 2020, 9-11 am via ZOOM

Maslow argued that as humans and societies develop, their needs are dematerialized and elevated. Under the COVID-19 disaster, our needs may be changing, and this may be influencing our society and politics.

Lecturer: Dr. Edward Hoffman

Adjunct Clinical Associate Professor of Psychology
Yeshiva University, NY
Ph.D. (Psychology and Education, University of Michigan)

Moderator:

Dr. Plamen Akaliyski and Dr. Naoko Taniguchi
Graduate School of System Design and Management

Information:

Please register through the Graduate School of System Design and Management's events calendar (<http://www.sdm.keio.ac.jp/>).
The URL and passcode for ZOOM will be sent to those who register.

